Role: AI Trainer & Evaluator

Re: AI Trainer & Evaluator

This role sits right where two of my strengths meet: evaluating AI outputs against clear rubrics, and reading complex subject matter across business, finance, healthcare and legal domains. Both are already part of my daily work, so I could contribute high quality input from the first task.

I build and operate LLM and GenAI systems, which means I spend real time scoring model outputs for relevance, coherence and factual accuracy, categorizing issues and documenting them so the model improves. What I add beyond the mechanics is genuine domain depth: more than 15 years across banking and finance, healthcare through a health AI platform, and legal and government work such as the digitalization of a national judicial branch. That background lets me judge not only whether a response reads well, but whether it is actually correct and appropriate for the field it speaks to. As a graduate level professor I am also used to interpreting rubrics, scoring large volumes of work consistently, and writing precise, nuanced feedback.

I will be straightforward: my content evaluation comes from quality review of AI outputs and academic assessment rather than from years inside a dedicated data annotation tool, so I would ramp on your specific annotation platform quickly and follow your guidelines to the letter. I hold a Bachelor's degree and an MBA, I work well independently and with a team, and I am fully remote and flexible. I would welcome a sample task to show the care and accuracy I bring.

Best regards,
