Role: AI Training Specialist

Re: AI Training Specialist

I am applying for the AI Training Specialist role because evaluating and improving AI outputs is already what I do every day, and I would genuinely enjoy doing it in a flexible, task based format alongside leading research labs.

I build and operate LLM and GenAI systems, which means I spend my time judging model outputs for quality, accuracy, tone and relevance, and following clear guidelines and rubrics to keep results consistent. I am meticulous, I notice the things others miss, and I deliver reliably without needing any hand holding. My written English is professional, and as a graduate level professor I am comfortable applying evaluation criteria and giving precise, well reasoned feedback. I am equally comfortable navigating web based tools and working through structured tasks at a steady, accurate pace.

I am fully remote, flexible on hours, and honestly interested in the quality side of AI rather than only the building side. I would be glad to start with a sample task whenever it suits you and show the level of care and consistency I bring to every assignment.

Best regards,
